

RPNM Statement on Presidents' Day

Presidents' Day traditionally recognizes George Washington, the first U.S. President, and Abraham Lincoln, the 16th U.S. president. Over time, this federal holiday became a day to remember all past U.S. presidents.

As we celebrate Presidents' Day at RPNM, we take a moment to honor the great Republican leaders who have shaped our nation. Among them, Abraham Lincoln stands out as a pivotal figure who played a key role in ending slavery in America.

We also pay tribute to President Ronald Reagan, who was essential in defeating the Soviet Union and uniting Americans under our shared conservative values.

Finally, we recognize President Donald Trump for his historic foreign peace deals and his leadership in driving an economic boom that led to one of the lowest unemployment rates for the country, especially among minority groups.

As we approach an important election year, let us draw inspiration from the memory of past great American presidents. May their wisdom guide our nation to choose a leader who will steer our country toward a more safe, prosperous, and free future.
