

'Built for the Future' Conference Planned for June 10

Conference is First to be Hosted by Planning and Land Use Department

The City of Santa Fe's Planning and Land Use Department will be hosting its inaugural 'Built for the Future' conference convening on June 10 at the Santa Fe Convention Center from 8 am to 2 pm.

The event will bring together builders, architects, planners, developers and realtors to discuss the evolving landscape of development in Santa Fe. In this planned series of community engagement events, the main focus of the first convening will be on planning and permitting literacy.

Participants will have the opportunity to gain an understanding of how to better navigate planning and permitting processes, avoid common errors, and help ensure timely processing of land use activities.

The Land Use Department is working to advance innovative solutions to enhance operations and to streamline and improve processes.

These improvements are part of broader policy updates, including a thorough revision of the Land Development Code and General Plan Update (that will include the creation of a robust digital platform solution allowing quicker more effective access to planning and permitting documents and data).

These initiatives will help achieve optimal alignment of the goals of the community with much-needed housing and commercial development to meet the needs of Santa Fe.

Free registration here.

Event Highlights:

- Keynote Speaker: Matt Goebel, a planner, attorney, and acclaimed author, is known for his insightful works such as Rules that Shape Urban Form and Aesthetics, Community Character, and the Law. His expertise in the economic benefits of historic preservation and addressing regulatory barriers to affordable housing will offer valuable perspectives to attendees. Goebel will give a brief overview of the updates in process for Chapter 14. These updates are intended to provide a clear and easy to understand regulatory framework.
- Dynamic Workshops: Gain first-hand knowledge on the latest in permitting and planning, reflecting our dedication to streamlined service and process efficiency.

Event Details:

- Date: June 10
- Time: 8 AM to 2 PM, networking breakfast and lunch provided
- Location: City of Santa Fe Convention Center
- Admission: Registration required, free to attend

About the Land Use Department: The Land Use Department is responsible for planning, zoning, and development review processes to ensure sustainable growth and vibrant communities in Santa Fe. Visit the project website, santafeldcupdate.org to learn more.